

Duality and asynchronous distributed algorithms for variational mechanics and feedback control of networks

Sanjay Lall

Stanford University
Stanford, CA 94305

June 13, 2002

Abstract

This talk will describe an approach for constructing distributed, asynchronous algorithms for systems where optimization and variational principles play an important role. The links between variational mechanics, optimal control, and the recent developments in modeling the congestion control mechanism of TCP will be discussed.